WHO Guidance

The following descriptions and recommendations were extracted from WHO guidance on safe abortion.

Health-care professionals who claim conscientious objection must refer the woman to another willing and trained provider in the same, or another easily accessible health-care facility. Where referral is not possible, the health-care professional who objects, must provide safe abortion to save the woman's life, to prevent serious injury to her health and provide urgent care when women present with complications from an unsafe or illegal abortion. Safe Abortion Guidelines, § 4.2.2.5.

Additional notes

No doctor, nurse or medical assistant is required to contribute to the termination of pregnancy. The requested doctor is required to inform the person concerned, from the first visit, of his refusal to intervene. In this case, the doctor indicates the contact details of another doctor, of a pregnancy termination center or of a hospital service that he can contact for a new request for termination of pregnancy. The doctor who refuses the voluntary interruption transmits the medical file to the new doctor consulted by the woman.
