Abortion at the woman's request

- Gestational limit: 12

Legal Ground and Gestational Limit
Economic or social reasons

Socio-economic factors may be considered in the process of assessing a woman’s eligibility for termination of her pregnancy. The Criminal Code states: “The termination of pregnancy performed by a physician with the consent of the pregnant woman shall not be unlawful if, considering the present and future living conditions of the pregnant woman, the termination of the pregnancy is medically necessary to avert a danger to the life or the danger of grave injury to the physical or mental health of the pregnant woman and if the danger cannot reasonably be averted in another way from her point of view.”

WHO Guidance

The following descriptions and recommendations were extracted from WHO guidance on safe abortion.

A woman is entitled to know the status of her pregnancy and to act on this information; health protection or social reasons can be interpreted to include distress of the pregnant woman caused by the diagnosis of foetal impairment. Prenatal tests and other medical diagnostic services cannot legally be refused because the woman may decide to terminate her pregnancy. Safe Abortion Guidelines, § 4.2.1.4.

Additional notes

The “eugenic indication” which used to be explicitly mentioned in section 218a no. 1 StGB-af (old version of the German Criminal Code) was abolished by the SFHÄndG [Act to Amend the Act on Assistance for Pregnant Women and Families] of 21 August 1995 (Federal Law Gazette I p. 1050). Today the legal situation is as follows: there is no “eugenic indication” in the German Criminal Code. But if the pregnant woman is under considerable mental stress because prenatal diagnosis (PND) has shown genetic or prenatal damage to the unborn child and she does not consider herself mentally able to raise a disabled child, a medically indicated abortion can be granted. In this particular case, the requirement for the (medical) indication is the necessity to avert a danger to the life of the pregnant woman or a danger of grave injury to her physical or mental health.

The following is stated in Bundestag Printed Paper 13/1850: “The embryopathic indication has been rejected. As became particularly clear from the statements made by associations representing disabled people, this regulation had created the misunderstanding that the justification was based on a disabled child having an inferior right to life. But the regulations on the embryopathic indication were always based on the consideration that such cases can lead to an unacceptable strain being placed on the pregnant woman. The wording with regard to medical indication in section 218a StGB [...] enables these situations to be covered. It has thus been made clear that a disability can never lead to a lowering in the standards of protection applied to human life.”

WHO Guidance

The following descriptions and recommendations were extracted from WHO guidance on safe abortion.

The human right to life requires protection by law, including when pregnancy is life-threatening or a pregnant woman's life is otherwise endangered. Both medical and social conditions can constitute life-threatening conditions. Safe Abortion Guidelines, § 4.2.1.1.

- Source document: WHO Safe Abortion Guidance (page 102)

The following descriptions and recommendations were extracted from WHO guidance on safe abortion.

Laws, policies and practices that restrict access to abortion information and services can deter women from care seeking and create a "chilling effect" (suppression of actions because of fear of reprisals or penalties) for the provision of safe, legal services. Examples of barriers include: requiring third-party authorization from one or more medical professionals or a hospital committee, court or police, parent or guardian or a woman's partner or spouse. WHO Guidance

The following descriptions and recommendations were extracted from WHO guidance on safe abortion.

In situations where abortion is restricted for sex selection purposes, terminating a pregnancy for this reason is likely to involve an unsafe procedure carrying high risks. Any policies or guidelines on the use of technology in obstetric and fetal medicine should take into account the need to ensure women’s access to safe abortion and other services - efforts to manage or limit sex selection should also not hamper or limit access to safe abortion services. Preventing gender-biased sex selection: an interagency statement, p 10 - Recommendation.

Additional notes

Prenatal genetic testing is addressed in section 15 (1) of the Act on Genetic Testing: Prenatal genetic testing may only be carried out for medical purposes and only where and to the extent that testing aims to look for certain genetic traits in the embryo or foetus that, according to the generally recognised state of the art, adversely affect its prenatal or postnatal health or if it is intended to treat the embryo or foetus with a medicinal product the effect of which is affected by certain genetic traits.

While abortion is legal on request if not more than twelve weeks have elapsed since conception under Section 218a (1) of the Criminal Code, the Act on Genetic Testing stipulates that the foetal gender can be disclosed on request only after 12 weeks of pregnancy.

List of restrictions

1. Whoever publicly, in a meeting or through dissemination of written materials (section 11(3)), for material gain or in a grossly inappropriate manner, offers, announces or commends
2. his own services for performing terminations of pregnancy or for supporting them, or the services of another; or
3. means, objects or procedures capable of terminating a pregnancy with reference to this capacity, or makes declarations of such a nature shall be liable to imprisonment not exceeding two years or a fine.

(2) Subsection (1) No 1 above shall not apply when physicians or statutorily recognised counselling agencies provide information about which physicians, hospitals or institutions are prepared to perform a termination of pregnancy under the conditions of section 218a(1) to (3).

(3) Subsection (1) No 2 above shall not apply if the offence was committed with respect to physicians or persons who are authorised to trade in the means or objects mentioned in subsection (1) No 2 or through a publication in professional medical or pharmaceutical journals. (4) Subsection (1) shall not apply when doctors, hospitals or institutions 1. provide information about the fact that they undertake abortions under §218a subsections 1 to 3, 2. point to information provided by a federal or state authority, a counselling centre under the Conflict Pregnancy Law or a medical association.

The Federal Medical Association maintains a list - which is updated monthly - of doctors, hospitals and institutions having indicated they undertake abortions under §218a subsections 1 to 3. When such information has been provided, the list also contains information on abortion methods provided. Information about this list is accessible also via the Federal Centre for Health Education website and the federal central emergency hotline.

WHO Guidance

The following descriptions and recommendations were extracted from WHO guidance on safe abortion.

Health-care professionals who claim conscientious objection must refer the woman to another willing and trained provider in the same, or another easily accessible health-care facility. Where referral is not possible, the health-care professional who objects, must provide safe abortion to save the woman's life, to prevent serious injury to her health and provide urgent care when women present with complications from an unsafe or illegal abortion. Safe Abortion Guidelines, § 4.2.2.5.

Additional notes

While nobody is obliged to participate in a pregnancy termination, this is not the case if participation is necessary in order to protect the woman from risk of death or serious health damage which cannot be averted in another manner.
