WHO Guidance

The following descriptions and recommendations were extracted from WHO guidance on safe abortion.

A woman is entitled to know the status of her pregnancy and to act on this information; health protection or social reasons can be interpreted to include distress of the pregnant woman caused by the diagnosis of fetal impairment. Prenatal tests and other medical diagnostic services cannot legally be refused because the woman may decide to terminate her pregnancy. Safe Abortion Guidelines, § 4.2.1.4.

If the woman is under the age of eighteen, the consent of the person exercising parental authority or guardianship over the woman is required for the termination of the pregnancy. However, in the first ninety days, when there are serious reasons that prevent or discourage the consultation of persons exercising parental authority or guardianship, or, when consulted, they refuse their consent or express opinions that differ from each other, the counseling center or the socio- health care, or the medical officer, carries out the tasks and procedures referred to in Article 5 and submits a report, accompanied by its opinion, to the tutelary judge of the place where it operates within seven days of the request. The guardianship judge, within five days, having heard the woman and taking into account her will, the reasons she gives and the report sent to him, can authorize the woman, with an act not subject to complaint, to decide the termination of the pregnancy.

Judicial authorization in cases of rape

The following descriptions and recommendations were extracted from WHO guidance on safe abortion.

Health-care professionals who claim conscientious objection must refer the woman to another willing and trained provider in the same, or another easily accessible health-care facility. Where referral is not possible, the health-care professional who objects, must provide safe abortion to save the woman's life, to prevent serious injury to her health and provide urgent care when women present with complications from an unsafe or illegal abortion. Safe Abortion Guidelines, § 4.2.2.5.
